Recovery of a Long-Lost Boy.

Philadelphia Record.

After working zealously since the 31st of May, 1879, the Children's Society of this city has recovered in Chicago the boy Charles Christian. The discovery of the lad is due to the efforts of the Humane Society of Chicago, and brings to a climax the romantic but unpleasant experiences of this child. At the age of 12 years young Christian was taken from his home in Courtrai, Belgium, by a man named Vandendrik, who had promised to let the mother hear from him from time to time. This duty, however, he had never performed. After seeking here in vain for the boy the Philadelphia society ascertained that he was in the custody of a man named Francois Vanbeck and wife, who were beggars in Chicago. A letter to this man in July, 1880, brought an answer demanding a reward for the return of Christian, but when the police were called into the matter the party had disappeared from their regular haunts. On Tuesday the man and woman were captured and the boy recovered. Though 19 years of age he looks no more than 18, being undersized and sickly. Arrangements have been made for the return of the lad to his mother in Belgium.

Tom Benton's Vanity.

Philadelphia Press.

This recital recalls the scene between General Simon Cameron and Tom Benton, once related to me by the venerable Pennsylvania. It was during Mr. Cameron's first year in the Senate, 1846, I think. Benton was apparently wrapped in his own greatness, and hardly recognized any of the younger Senators. Going up the hill to the Capitol one day, Mr. Cameron overtook the Missouri statesman, and never before having spoken to him, saluted him.

"Good morning, Senator."

"Good morning, sir," replied Mr. Benton.

"It is a pleasant day, Senator."

"Yes sir."

"I hope, said General Cameron, "that I shall hear you speak on the Oregon boundary question. I have heard many others, but would like to hear your opinion of that measure."

"Yes sir," replied Mr. Benton, "you will hear me speak upon the Oregon boundary question, and when you do hear me upon that proposition, sir, you will see that I will annihilate those who have spoken on either side like an elephant treading upon a bed of pismires."

Patti has once again made a successful reappearance at Covent Garden. I was talking the other day, says Labouchere, with a gentleman closely connected with operas and opera singers. I remarked what an immense amount of money this favorite artiste must have made for herself, during her twenty-one years' career. "Yes," he replied; "but think what she has drawn for other people. Take for instance her connection with Covent Garden. She has sung there for twenty-one seasons; say she appeared twenty-four times each season, which is a low average. As from the first performance to the last she has always drawn full houses, you may calculate that on each occasion she sang, the house represented over £1,000. Put these facts together, and you will find that Patti alone has brought over half a million into Mr. Dye's coffers."

A Fish-Stealing Snake.

Maryville Appeal.

Amos Sewell, of this city, went fishing last Saturday. After much angling he caught a perch, and laid it on the grass beneath the tree. The day was very warm, and divesting himself of a few garments he reclined in the shade and went to sleep. He woke to find a snake in the act of swallowing his fish. One half of the perch had already disappeared down the snake's throat. Mr. Sewell woke up just in time to kill the snake and save his fish. The snake was three feet long and of the milk species. The perch weighed half a pound, and made a large mouthful for the serpent. This is the first case of a snake stealing fish ever heard of in this section.

An eminent geologist is firm in the belief that the so-called meteorites from time to time cast upon our globe are thrown from other planets by volcanic eruptions. If this theory be true then it must be accepted as a fact that these planets are not inhabited. Bootjacks, shaving mugs, chunks of coal, porter bottles and other missiles would also be cast upon our earth were the same there as here. When a man leaves a bootjack at a bar he infuses enough strength into his arm to send the missile into a neighboring planet, and Mars must be thickly strewn with such things.—Wormswood Herald.

Prejudice Kills.

Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery under the care of the best (and some of the worst) physicians who gave her no relief. We discontinued all medical treatment, and now are restored to a good health by the simple remedy as Hop Bitters, that we had poohed at for two years, before using. We earnestly hope and pray that no one will let your sick suffer as did our daughter, as poor as she is, to seek a medicine as Hop Bitters. —The Parents.

The President's Treatment.

Surgeon-General Barnes has given the following description of President Garfield's treatment: The President has every chance which a careful watching of the changes, excellent health and constitution and a gallant struggle for his own life can afford. We treat him internally with milk and lime water and give him hypodermic injections of morphine to allay nervousness. To the wound we applied a cold compress to prevent inflammation from setting in. It is too early yet to say whether we shall attempt to extract the ball. At any rate it would be dangerous to attempt it now. I cannot be sanguine of his recovery, and yet we are justified in hoping for it.

A BOLD ROBBER.

How Eleven Trunk-bots Were Made to Stand and Deliver by one Small Man.

The stage robbery committed about four miles south of Sierraville and which the GAZETTE mentioned on the day of its occurrence, surprises the Truckee Republican. Sol. Rousseau was the first victim who came under the surveillance of the robber. He was proceeding on his way with his fast freight team and had six passengers on board, when a man with a double barreled shot gun stepped from the side of the road and ordered a halt. Rousseau was not slow in obeying. The robber then compelled all of the passengers to dismount and arrange them selves in a line in the middle of the road, and then had the team driven to one side and fastened. He then turned his attention to the passengers. While he was thus engaged, a team belonging to Mr. Buxton who owned the Sierra valley stage line came along. The robber ordered the driver to halt and compelled him to take his position on the side of the road with the others. The robber kept those whom he had thus "cornered," in this position for over an hour waiting for the arrival of the regular stage. When Buxton drove up with the stage the robber stepped around to where he was sitting, leveled the shot gun at him, ordered him to get down and take the places with the others. He then ordered Buxton to take a rock and break open the Wells Fargo treasure box, keeping him covered with the shot gun and telling him to hurry up with the job or he would put a charge of buck shot through him. After considerable difficulty Buxton managed to get the box open and took therefrom the wallet containing the treasure, way-bills and a small package which he handed to the robber.

At Carson the celebration was quite tame and spiritless, owing to the fact that the Comstock militiamen were not able to pay their fare to the Capital. The races were, however, well attended.

Downer's sorrel horse won the first trotting race from Honey Lake Chief, after an exciting contest. Five heats were trotted. Time: 2:45-2:39½-2:42-2:43-2:47½. Frank Dodd drove the Chief and made it very sultry for the Carson flyer.

The three-year-old race was won by Smith Hill, of Reno, with Wimmenack in two straight heats. Time: 2:35-3:22.

Nelson, of Reno, won the third race with Roan Tom. Time: 3:28-47½-3:05. The day was quiet and the crowd unenthusiastic. A Reno visitor says: "You might have heard a pin drop anywhere between the Mint and the St. Charles' Hotel."

At Verdi there were about 500 people, and they were a merry-making gang. The Truckee people were out in force, and seemed to enjoy the day. Merrill's Grove is a very pleasant place, and the ancient town of Pio Pio Creek was very well patronized. Elsewhere throughout the State there was very little to report. At Eureka and Virginia celebrations were attempted, but they were not largely attended. The attempted assassination of President Garfield seems to have cast a gloom over the entire Union.

A Choice Life Saver.

Chicago Field.

A remarkable piece of intelligence was displayed recently by Mr. De Luze's spaniel Sankey, at the Westminster kennels. The superintendent was rowing across the lake, and several of the dogs were following him. Among the number was Mr. Elliott Smith's little terror Wasp, who, while swimming, suddenly sank with a little cry, and did not come to the surface again. Sankey swam around the spot where the little bitch had disappeared, and dived; then came up again, paddled about the place uttering sharp barks. After two or three more unsuccessful dives he came to the surface with the bitch in his mouth. He carried her at once to the shore, and laid her on the grass. Wasp was quite lifeless, but after working over her for several minutes the men succeeded in reviving her, and she is now as well as ever. Mr. Smith intends presenting Sankey with a life saver's medal, a reward the spaniel certainly merits for this almost, quite human bravery and intelligence.

Breaking the News.

Boston Post.

There seems to be a streak of something in folks that causes them, with the best intentions in the world, to do the easiest things imaginable. So it was with Mr. Ragbag the other day when old Judge Beerbutter got choked with a brandy sling, which brought on a fit of apoplexy and slew him. Ragbag was sent to break the news gently to the Judge's wife. Now of all the mean grumps ever a man was sent on, that of breaking bad news gently is the meanest. But Ragbag was a man of fierce invention, and he though he had got a neat idea. So when he arrived at the house he said to the widow: "Mrs. Beerbutter, I have been sent to notify you that your husband will not live with you hereafter." If he had told her the Judge was dead she might probably have stooped it. But the idea of being heartlessly deserted sent her into four hours of hysterics, and the whole neighborhood blamed Ragbag for wantonly harrowing up a woman's feeling.

Watering Stock.

Charles Francis Adams shows how the street railway corporations of New York have watered their stock. He says: "Those best informed assert that the original stockholders of the Second avenue road did not pay a cent for their stock. The road cost $250,000; its stock now stands at $618,000, and its bonds at $350,000. The Third avenue road cost $463,000; its capital is now $1,250,000, or three times the cost, and within a year each stockholder has received a bond equal to his stock, making a fictitious capital more than five times the cost. The Sixth and Eighth avenue, more moderate, are contented as yet with a four-fold inflation. When, therefore, these roads, like steam roads, complain that, notwithstanding all this, they can make only a moderate dividend of six to ten per cent. per annum on their capital, it becomes a pertinent question whether they mean six to ten per cent. on their paper capital, or thirty to fifty per cent. on the real cost of their roads."

Two Situations.

It's off for F. S. T.

Here was the first. A ragged boy of ten was hanging around the corner of Woodward avenue and Montcalm street, and six or seven better dressed boys were blowing pens at him, and calling him names and daring him to pitch in.

Here was the second. The ragged boy entered a grocery and bought a five cent peanut and as he started off up the street six boys followed after saying respectively:

"I told you he was a half-bog!"

"If anybody strikes him he'll get punched!"

"What a nice boy he is!"

"Show me the boy who threw mud at him!"

"Of course he'll divide. He ain't no hog!"

"I'll bet he could lick the whole pile of us, only his mother told him not to fight!"

Smuggling has been carried on for years along the northern borders of Sonora, but for the last year has greatly increased. The Mexican Government has resolved to stop it.

Professor Hilgard, of the University of California, with a number of scientists, will soon make a geological survey of the mineral and coal bearing district of Washington Territory.

Sunday afternoon George and Theo. Cooper, aged 10 and 12 years, were drowned while bathing in the Jordan River, near Salt Lake, the former in trying to rescue his younger brother.
